

Published based on A Thought About Britain Includes

A Thought About Britain Includes

Britain (like any other country) is one that prides itself in many things and yes a lot of them are very stereotypical of the country too. So what are the biggest things that people in Britain pride themselves in?

History

This one had to be at the top really didn't it and this is because Britain has a very long and rich history full of many interesting time periods. The most famous time period that we have in the UK is arguably the Tudor period in which King Henry VII was in power and I am assuming this is because it was a very violent time period and people just seem to love these kinds of things.

Bowls

The home of bowls is in the south of England which is partly why I feel it is so popular over here among older generations. Although a lot of people feel that not many people play bowls it would seem that a fair amount actually do and many more watch tournaments when they are on and some of the best greens can be found in Britain. Bowls holidays are favourable among many people.

Of course these are not the only two things that there are to do in Britain and there are many other things such as holidays in Devon and spa breaks and this is something that a lot of people seem to enjoy. Devon is a great place to visit in the UK if you want to go to the countryside and if you fancy a bit of surfing then Cornwall is the place to go.

Of course for most visitors it is the cities such as London and Manchester are the ways to go but you need to realise some of the countryside is just as good too.

You can also find this article published on A Thought About Britain Includes, and on the tag pages Countryside, Course, holidays in devon, king henry vii, pride, spa breaks.