You can try hitting the magazines and reviews like the v2 cigs review to check what you may have missed or need to work on. To give you a little heads up, here are some tips and guidelines to use when planning for your wedding day.

Sitting Plan - If you've friends and relatives who can't stand each other's presence, you ought to make the seating plan one of the priorities. Properly placing in your wedding guests is always important. You have to consider your guests when it comes to where they want to sit and who they want to sit with.

Foods Served - Many wedding parties concentrate on the meals and the wedding cake. Needless to say, following that long wedding ceremony, you'd probably wish your friends and relatives to get a lot of energy during the reception. Apart from this reason, you also have to make sure that none of the foods you serve must be safe for everybody to eat. Before choosing the foods for your wedding, make sure that none of your guests will have allergies with what you will be serving.

Reception Area - When you have 50 friends and families, make sure that the area isn't too big, or not too small. You do not want your guests to feel too choked up with such a small venue. Nor do you want them to feel so far away from each other if the venue is too big. The space should just be enough for you, your partner, and the guests as well.

The Band - When choosing the band to perform in your wedding ceremony, the reception, and for the entertainment as well, make sure they won't play songs that will put you and your guests to sleep. Before hiring them, ask them to play a song from your selection list. By doing this, the two of you will be aware if they're indeed the right band to play on your wedding.
