Checked baggage is no longer free. The charge for the first bag is pretty reasonable. The fees start adding up quickly after that, though. One way to save money on baggage is to pack your clothes into your carry on if you are only taking a short trip. While this won't exactly save you money on your actual flight, it can save you money while you travel. If you are traveling for an extended period of time, you may consider buying your clothes at your destinations. Besides, you'll want to go shopping anyway, right?

You need to sign up for all of the frequent flyer programs that you can. You will then get points for every trip you take no matter which airline you are travelling on. Airlines enjoy rewarding frequent flyers with member only perks. Typically these are offered as a means to try and get you to stay loyal to one airline. The more lists you are on the more money you can save later. Some airlines will give you points for every mile you fly. Some will also offer a trip by trip basis option. You will still get bonus points regardless of whether or not you sign up with everyone.

If you notice that the price of tickets on your flight has gone down since you purchased yours, ask for a refund! So many people can get cheap international flights just by asking for a refund so that they end up paying the same price as other people do. One option if they won't issue a refund is to cancel and repurchase. Ask for the discounts they are out there. You are less likely to get the cheapest airfare if you are scared to take a chance and ask for the discount. You don't have to rob Peter to fly internationally. In fact, flying internationally can be affordable if you approach your ticket buying the right way. If you are smart, patient and willing to do your research you can very easily find international flight tickets that are offered at an affordable rate. Should you have to suffer the high cost of international flights? NO of course not. Save your money, beat out the big guy, use the money you'll save for more fun things.!
